BIOSECURITY, A KEY ISSUE FOR THE POULTRY INDUSTRY

Referring to the recent avian influenza crisis and the need to decrease the use of antibiotics for reducing antibiotic resistance, there is an emerging need to manage biosecurity policies at a local, regional, national and international level, to avoid farm to farm contaminations.

Although biosecurity practices are quite often well known, the compliance in poultry production chain is not optimum. Up to date, there is no easy source of information available on biosecurity in European countries. Therefore, this knowledge needs to be shared among European poultry professionals, from hatching to slaughter.

COLLECT, SELECT, TEST AND SHARE the best supporting measures to improve biosecurity compliance.

Thanks to the national networks of NetPoulSafe partners, the best supporting measures to improve biosecurity compliance will be gathered. The most promising ones will be tested through pilot farms in different countries and types of production. Farmers and advisers will be trained to apply these supporting measures in real life.

BUILDING A EUROPEAN KNOWLEDGE PLATFORM DEDICATED TO BIOSECURITY COMPLIANCE

Videos, e-learning courses, best practice guides and many other resources issued from the project will be shared on an online knowledge platform to help field actors enhance their level of biosecurity compliance throughout the poultry production chain.

WE NEED YOU!

All actors in the poultry industry are invited to participate in the NetPoulSafe stakeholders network. Join us on board!
